Q: How to implement a "primary key" for a list when primary key is a column of table? I have a case that I want to construct a database but when I want to fetch the "primary key" which is a column of a table is a "List". How can I achieve that? EDIT This is an example of a database I want to fetch using code as follows entities[0].Id = new Queryable().Select(c => c.Id).Distinct().OrderBy(x => x).OrderBy(x => x).ToList(); What I want is that I can fetch the "Id" through a list. A: If you have a list of entities where the Id is unique, then you could for example implement an IEquatable as follows: public class Entity : IEquatable { public int Id { get; set; } public override bool Equals(object other) { if (other is Entity otherEntity) return Id == otherEntity.Id; return false; } public override int GetHashCode() { return Id; } } ba244e880a
