Nearly two decades after the Human Genome Project, what is known as lipidomics, or the science of all lipids, is now up and running in Nigeria. "In the past, lipidomics was an expensive process, but now we can measure every lipid and drug in biological samples and compare them," said Akinyemi Aremu, Director of Biomarkers at the University of Ilorin, Nigeria. "That means we can know exactly which drugs are working or not in the body 2d92ce491b
