No. 08/842,922 filed Apr. 6, 1997. 1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to fuel injection systems in which each fuel injector is connected to a fuel rail and, more particularly, to a fuel rail and fuel injector assembly, an electrical connector disposed between the fuel injector and the fuel rail, and a method of connecting the fuel injector to the fuel rail. 2. Description of the Related Art It is common in fuel delivery systems for a diesel engine to employ a fuel rail or manifold into which the injectors feed fuel. The fuel is distributed via a pipe or hose to the fuel injectors. The injectors themselves typically include a solenoid-actuated valve body that is hydraulically urged to a closed position. In such systems, a valve is required in the hose to allow fuel to pass to the injectors. In this type of system, the injector is first attached to the fuel rail. In order to do this, a fuel delivery connector is typically used. The connector includes a main body and a mating plug that snaps into the connector body. The fuel delivery connector body is rem
