Distributed under the terms of the GNU General Public License, version 3 or later [^1]: MATLAB is an acronym for MATHtetics Language for Arithmetic. [^2]: The only other language that claims to be an 'ancient' is Tcl/Tk. [^3]: MATLAB's other attempt to appeal to the embedded world is the graphical matlabfront. [^4]:

Another slight peculiarity is that both C and C++ can be used to write and compile Matlab Coder files, but since C is not an embeddable language, the Matlab Coder toolbox could only be written in C++. [^5]: The main problem with the GUI is that it has no built-in facilities for file saving and loading. A workaround is to use `mex` to compile the Matlab Coder file and then use `str2mat` to load the resulting Matlab Coder file. [^6]: A related attempt was made by [^MV:Embedded01]. The crucial difference is that a special command-line interface was provided in that work. [^7]: It is much more difficult to implement a command-line interface in MATLAB as you need to pass the matrices as pointers to functions in a dynamic language like Matlab. [^8]: Note that if you specify the optional arguments to a `vlen` command, the optional arguments will be ignored. [^9]: The logic here is that if the first non-zero entry of the vector is a negative number, then f3e1b3768c
