The code was inspired by a series of weird pictures in The New York Times from December 1933 that featured an island where the letters in the word "geography" were moved around. The letters "y," "p," and "o" are joined together and printed on the back of the page instead of their normal position. The series of images were titled "Geography Revisited." The code, or tic, appeared in the Leidsch Dagblad. RELATED COLLECTIONS.
