A futuristic mouse cursor with a small Windows logo placed in the center of it.Q: Mongoose querying, how to pull specific items from arrays I am fairly new to MongoDB and Mongoose and am trying to make some queries. My setup is that I have a series of books and a series of book pages. The book has an ID and the page has an ID. I want to make a query where I return the bookID and the pageID with the respective bookPage where both are the same. This is what I have so far: var schema = mongoose.Schema({ title: { type: String, required: true, lowercase: true, index: true }, pageID: { type: Number, required: true, index: true }, isbn: { type: Number, required: true, index: true }, bookPage: { type: Number, required: true, index: true }, page: { type: Number, required: true, index: true }, pages: [{ type: Number, required: true, index: true } ]}); var myBook = new Book({ title: 'The Book of D'um', pages: [{ pageID: 1, bookPage: 1, page: 1 }, { pageID: 2, bookPage: 1, page: 2 }, { pageID: 3, bookPage: 1, page: 3 }, { pageID: 4, bookPage: 1, page: 4 } ]}); var myPage = new Page({ pageID: 1, bookPage: 1, page: 1, book: myBook }); myBook.find().populate('bookPage').exec(function(err, books) { if (err) { return console.error(err); } myBook.find(

It features a futuristic mouse cursor with a stylized Mac logo placed in the center of it. In order to use this theme, you must install CursorFX beforehand. Once you do so, simply access the application, open a new package and import the new theme. Mac Style contains a theme for normal cursor states, such as standard and help select, working in back, busy, precision and text select, handwriting, unavailable, North (Vertical) resize, move, alternate select, hand and button. With the help of the settings provided by CursorFX, you are able to edit properties for each mouse state when it comes to the hot spot coordinates, number of frames, looping mode, interval between frames, alternate and scripted animation. Plus, you can import your own graphics with the PNG format. The theme smoothly integrates into CursorFX and didn't cause the program to hang, crash or pop up error dialogs throughout our testing. It certainly brings a new and exciting appearance to the operating system's interface, although it hasn't been updated for a while. On the downside, Mac Style does not feature special effects, trails or sounds. Nevertheless, it should certainly satisfy users who are looking for a modern approach to the mouse cursor's look. Mac Style Description: 1. Unzip to a temporary folder. 2. Go to the downloaded folder. 3. 09e8f5149f
