man who gets sent to a magical fairy world Searching for a story I read some years ago. It was about an old man who was amoral and wicked. He did terrible things to everyone around him. He was sent to a magical world by some beautiful women. Once he was there he became happy and cared about the people around him. I believe he had to wear a suit once but something else came up and he wore it again when he returned home. A: After several years of googling "daffodils" I found this which looks like a match. I have never read this before, so I can't vouch for how good it is, but there are lots of good reviews on Goodreads. With the plot elements: Grand old man is sent by his master, the King, to a magical fairy world so that he may learn to live in harmony He meets a peasant who has been enslaved to power a wheel that grinds grain The old man secretly goes back to his master and requests freedom for the peasant While he's there, he puts the wheel to sleep, sees the king's dreams, and through dreams and magical influence, frees the peasant At one point in the story the king has a throne that is a giant lotus. Electrocardiographic-Troponin Imaging-Guided Ablation
