the HTML5 code of your videos to reuse them in other websites, and you can edit them at any time afterwards. What's New in This Release: * You can now record only the selected browser tab. * You can now edit the duration of the video recordings by tapping on the slider (and tap again to stop the editing). * The text of the descriptions in the settings of the browser tab recordings and the video and audio recordings can now be changed. * The time of the video and audio recordings can now be changed. * The browser tab recording frames can now be expanded or minimized with one touch. * The player frame can now be moved to anywhere on the screen. * Support for the latest version of Windows, the Windows 10, is provided. * This release has been optimized for Windows 10. * Some bugs have been fixed. Get it now and start taking recordings from your desktop, your browser, or even your webcam. Screencastify is a super-popular Chrome extension. If you haven't heard of it by now, it essentially helps you take quick, in-browser, and on-desktop screen recordings. These videos can be edited and easily shared, thanks to Screencastify's amazing capabilities. Record your screen and customize the experience As soon as you install Screencastify, you will quickly understand why it is so popular. No matter your field of activity or how skilled you are with technology, thanks to the extension's ability to offer a good user experience, you won't have any difficulties using or understanding it. The dropdown menu has three main screen recording options: browser tab, screen, webcam only. When enabled, the microphone option automatically detects all the voice recording devices you have available (currently connected to your PC). You can pick which one you prefer. The same mechanism applies to your webcam as well (choose what webcam you want, if you have multiple ones connected to your machine). In both recording modes — the browser tab or the whole desktop — you can choose to record yourself on the webcam and place the video container on any side of the screen. At any moment, the video camera container can be expended/minimized or set to fullscreen mode. Edit and share your screen recordings The video you record using Screencastify will be automatically saved in your personal library. From there, you can edit, share, and/or view your content, all the time. Each video thumbnail will display the recording's time and date, the
